BOY HERO NEAR DEATH IN EFFORT

Dragged from River Unconscious as Other Lad Goes Down.

Frenzied by Loss of Her Son Jersey Woman Jumps Into Stream.

(Special to The Evening World.)
LODL, N., J., April 5.—Nine-year-old Peter Galanti was drowned here to-day LAKE HUNTS WINE. in the Saddle River, and his younger brother, Joe, who went into the swollen stream to save him, was rescued in a dying condition. When the mother of the two boys learned of the tragedy she endeavored to end her life by jumpling into the water, and was pulled out his particular friends for many years. "I with difficulty. Her mind has become so affected by the tragedy that it is feared she will become insane.

The two youngsters played bookey from school and were romping on the bank of the Saddle River when Peter fell in. When his brother saw him being swept down stream he cried for help and aprang in after him. Though both youngsters could swim they were helpless in the swirling, muddy current. A farmer in the vicinity heard the boys cries and went in after them. He got to little Joe first and dragged him coff unconscious. Peter had disappeared.

When word reached the mother of what had happened she ran down to will be affected by the traged that he had saved it for his particular friends for many years. "I will just go down and get it. I kept it concealed," he said.

A few minutes later he came back and reported that his rare old prize was gone. Jacob Horn and John Davidson, employed at the house where Mr. Lake lives, were arrested last evening and charged with stealing the wine, The police say they found empty wine bottles suspiciously near Horn's house.

That is the way they make the stuff this fellow is drunk of," said the policeman who agreeted Edward Arnold in Washington and led him before Judge Mulowney. "They call it 'compound,' " the liceman explained.

"And did you drink it?" the Judge asked of the prisoner.

Arnold admitted that he had consumed a quart or so of the mixture.

"Take him, officer, and congratulate him," decided the Court, "and get him a Carnegie mesal if you can. He must be made of pir iron."
